United Shore Puts Community Giving Decisions in Hands of Employees

How one local company encourages its team members to be hands-on with the causes they care about.

Every United Shore team member is given four hours of Volunteer Time Off (VTO) to participate in a cause of their choice. Here, they volunteer at Gleaners Community Food Bank.

Working for a company that gives to charity makes everyone feel good. It makes people feel even better when they have the power to dictate where exactly a company sends its monetary donations. While that decision-making ability is rare, it's alive and well at United Shore, a Pontiac-based company that has made a name for itself as a nationally acclaimed workplace, #1 mortgage lender and local community ambassador.

United Shore runs a "Pay It Forward" program, a system that allows employees to earn points and then convert those points into real dollars that the company donates to the specific charities and causes of their choice – without employees needing to spend any of their own money.

United Shore donated over 200 backpacks to Pontiac schools as part of its Back to School backpack drive.

Employees have access to a catalog of nearly 50 local and national organizations, with charities being added every three months based on employee requests. Taking it a step further, United Shore employees can pinpoint tangible items within each charity that they want to contribute to.

For example, United Shore employees can send a lump-sum to the general American Cancer Society fund, or dedicate their donations to cover specific things like providing patients and caregivers with a night of free lodging when traveling for cancer treatment, or providing a ride to or from treatment or follow-up appointments.

People can even allocate their donations across different organizations – a can of paint to Habitat for Humanity, a warm meal from Gleaner's Community Food Bank, or a contribution to the construction of a barrier-free all-inclusive playground through Scarlet's Smile Foundation. The list goes on and on.

That puts a lot of choices and a lot of decision-making power in the hands of the company's nearly 3,000 people, who all earn points through a variety of ways, including:

- Unused PTO hours
- Internal or external "kudos" received
- Internal Brilliant Ideas that get implemented

The reason for putting employees in charge of decisions is simple – United Shore wants community giving to be more about employees engaging with causes they care about, as opposed to simply writing a check.

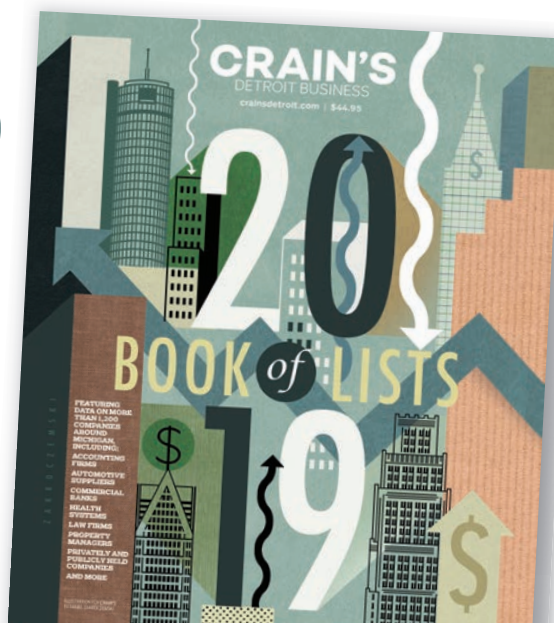

United Shore's perspective on community giving is refreshingly simple: If you can get people to rally behind the community and various organizations, and make choices that are important to them, then both the community and United Shore employees end up winning big in the end.

Are you one of those people who keep the Book of Lists at their desks all year long, dog-earing pages and wearing out the binding?

You already know it's packed with exclusive information on hundreds of Detroit-area companies.

But you may not know how deep the rabbit hole truly goes.

People with a Crain's Enhanced Membership do. With a few clicks, they can download the entire 2019 Book of Lists in Excel format. That file contains the names and titles of thousands of local executives. So if you want to know who's who in the Detroit business community — and maybe get them on your contacts list — that's a great place to start.

But it really is just the start. Enhanced Memberships offer the ability to download as many lists as you want for an entire year. Crain's also offers similar memberships at publications in Chicago, New York and Cleveland.

Of course, an Enhanced Membership still comes with the print edition of Crain's, including the Book of Lists. Enjoy it — but go easy on it. The binding won't last forever. — Chuck Soder, senior data editor, Crain City Books

BIG PICTURE/ MOTOR CITY

Detroit is the Motor City. You don't need us to tell you that.

But it's also a whole lot more than that. How much more — a tapestry woven by innovation and hard work across every industry in town — is spelled out in the pages that follow.

The bottom line: The automotive business is still the engine of Southeast Michigan, but it takes hundreds and thousands of parts to keep that machine running.

The numbers in these lists help tell the stories of the millions of people who make it all happen.

10 things to remember about 2018

Detroit's Amazon bid

The year was only a couple of weeks old when Detroit found out it hadn't made the first cut of cities vying for Amazon.com Inc.'s "HQ2" second headquarters. The online giant offered the explanation that Detroit's talent pool and transit weren't up to snuff.

As the year played out, the 20 remaining finalist cities jockeyed for attention from Bezos & Co. In the end, Amazon picked not one but three new locations. The two splitting the HQ2 were Long Island City in New York's Queens borough and suburban Washington, D.C. Amazon also announced a substantial location to be created in Nashville.

The end of the process drew criticism that it Amazon had rigged the game from the start to extract the maximum possible subsidies for the move — as well as criticism that it was case of the municipal rich getting richer.

Michigan Central Station's miracle

Amazon was always a long shot for Detroit, but something else that's always seemed like a long shot became more than just a dream with Ford Motor Co.'s announcement that it would buy and renovate the long-decrepit Michigan Central Station.

Ford paid a jaw-dropping $90 million for the building, which for years had been exposed to the elements, and plans a renovation worth more than $300 million. If there were ever a symbol of Detroit's decline, the train station would be it. Maybe its new life can serve as an equally potent symbol of rebirth.

LARRY PEPLIN FOR CRAIN'S

Ford paid $90 million for the Michigan Central Station and plans a renovation worth more than $300 million.

DMC's inspection troubles

The Detroit Medical Center continued to struggle with complaints about its sterile processing department, which prompted a second inspection by state regulators in October.

The hospital submitted a plan to remedy problems the state said it found.

At the same time, DMC got some measure of stability from a new five-year contract it made with University Physicians, the faculty practice of Wayne State University, after several years of tension. Then, however, UP filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in November.

It plans to reorganize and center itself on downtown Detroit operations serving DMC, but the bankruptcy does add a measure of uncertainty.

Hudson's site

The year 2017 ended with a groundbreaking at the site of the long-demolished Hudson's building in downtown Detroit. The year 2018 saw continual updates on the plans for a tower on the site — which at first was planned to be the tallest in the city by a few feet. By the end of the year, the plans had grown to more than 900 feet tall, which would dwarf the Marriott tower of the Renaissance Center by almost 200 feet.

The November election

Statewide office saw a nearly complete turnover with the election of Democrats Gretchen Whitmer as governor, Dana Nessel as attorney general and Jocelyn Benson as secretary of state. All of those offices were previously held by Republicans. Not changing hands was the Republican-dominated Legislature, which caused controversy with legislation in their lame-duck session to remove some powers from the offices those Democrats had won. As of press time, Gov. Rick Snyder had not said whether he would sign or veto them.

Minimum wage brouhaha

That Legislature also raised controversy — and maybe some sighs of relief from employers — by partially rolling back a plan to increase the minimum wage and mandate paid sick time. Those measures began as ballot issues, which the Republican-controlled Legislature then passed to keep them off the ballot. After the election, the same Legislature voted to drastically slow down the increase in the minimum wage and sharply dial back the sick-time mandate. A court challenge is possible.

UM's new embrace of Detroit

For decades, Ann Arbor and Detroit seemed to consider themselves in completely separate orbits. This year, the University of Michigan took major steps to expand in the city. UM bought out the Horace H. Rackham Building in Midtown, and later it joined in a $50 million plan with the Kresge Foundation to transform the Marygrove College campus into a cradle-to-college educational center and outpost of UM's education school. UM President Mark Schlissel has made no secret that he views a footprint in Detroit as vital to the university's future.

Scooters, scooters everywhere

One day, we had no electric scooters lying on our sidewalks awaiting renters. Then, one day, you couldn't help tripping over them. The sudden appearance of the scooter companies like Bird and Lime was the most visible change in Detroit's street life this year. It also opened eyes and wallets to the possibility that future mobility options might not come in the shape of a car. Now, we'll get to see how those scooters make it through a Michigan winter.

A trio of big company sales

Southeast Michigan saw its share of multibillion-dollar sales of major companies by local entrepreneurs. In the space of a few months, Ann Arbor-based Duo Security, Detroit-based Meridian Health and Troy-based Syntel Inc.

were all sold for more than $2 billion each ($3.2 billion in the case of Syntel). Duo's founder, Dug Song, remains with the company. Meridian's Cotton family and Syntel's Bharat Desai and his wife, Neerja Sethi, have moved on to other things with the proceeds of the sales.

Chemical Bank's big move

The Midland institution and the largest bank headquartered in Michigan surprised the state and business community with its announcement that it would move to Detroit and build a new 20-story headquarters in the city. It was the culmination of big changes for the bank since it acquired Troy-based Talmer Bancorp. After that, former Talmer President and CEO David Provost eventually assumed the same role at Chemical and former Talmer Chairman Gary Torgow became chairman of Chemical. The bank, already a powerhouse outstate, sees the move as a way to grow in Southeast Michigan.

10 things to watch in 2019

The future of the auto show

This January will mark the final edition of the North American International Auto Show as we have known it. After this year's show, we'll wait to see exactly how it evolves over the year-and-a-half that will elapse until the first June show in 2020. Expect the show's organizers to say more about the shape of that show this year, an event expected to extend the reach of the show well outside the confines of Cobo Center.

Henry Ford, Wayne State negotiate

Henry Ford Health System and Wayne State University's medical school should have a clearer idea of where their relationship will go after they signed a memorandum of understanding to create a deeper relationship in 2018. The two organizations have said they hope to have a final deal set in early 2019. The relationship holds the potential to change the shape of health care in downtown Detroit.

Tariff battles

The automotive business — and business at large — will keep close tabs on the continuing trade-war saga spurred by President Donald Trump. Trump, who declared himself a "Tariff Man" on Twitter in December and sent financial markets into a tizzy, is continuing negotiations with China, sometimes signaling a deal, and the administration sometimes walking that back. There is lots of uncertainty, but one certainty: The markets will continue to track every twist and turn in the coming year.

Money flows to neighborhoods

Seven major Detroit companies this month promised to kick in $5 million apiece to Detroit's Strategic Neighborhood Fund, an investment fund designed to help along improvements to Detroit's commercial corridors. The coming year should see interest in new projects in the targeted neighborhoods, for which the city aims to follow the model that worked in Midtown.

The never-ending MLS bid

We were waiting in 2018 for word on whether Dan Gilbert and Tom Gores would succeed in their bid to bring a Major League Soccer team to Detroit. We're still waiting. MLS did award one franchise this year, to Nashville, and is said to plan to add one more team aside from a new franchise in Austin, Texas. But it's not clear when that will happen. Maybe we'll know more this year.

GM's plant moves (and other automotive uncertainties)

General Motors Co. CEO Mary Barra made headlines with the announcement that GM would "unallocate" production at five plants, including the Detroit-Hamtramck Assembly and Warren Transmission plants. But that doesn't mean that closings are a done deal. The automaker will need to negotiate those closings with the United Auto Workers this year — a contract year. Those plants will certainly be a centerpiece of the negotiation.

Nick Lyon and Eden Wells trials

Current Health and Human Services Director Nick Lyon and state Chief Medical Officer Eden Wells are both likely headed to trial on charges related to legionnaires' disease deaths in Flint. Both remained on the job while facing preliminary examinations in 2018 and being ordered to trial for involuntary manslaughter, among other charges. Some have argued it amounted to criminalizing the decisions that state officials make every day in their jobs.

No-name CEO group gets a name

The regional cooperative often called the "no-name CEO group" will get a name — or at least the economic development nonprofit it's working on with the Detroit Regional Chamber will. The economic development nonprofit is expected to work on coordinating business attraction efforts for the region. The CEO group has also helped re-energize a pair of high schools in Detroit and is also looking at ways the city's public spaces and a diverse array of operators of them can work more closely together.

Legal pot And how it plays out

Michigan's big social change this year was the legalization by voters of marijuana for recreational use. It's already legal to possess it, though not to sell it. This year, the state will work through the regulatory structure that will govern a future retail industry, but we're not likely to see the first pot shops open until 2020. What that future will look like — and who will profit from it — will become clearer as the year goes on.

Recession fears

It isn't here yet — and nobody knows when it will be — but hanging over many business decisions in 2018 were fears of when the next recession will start and how bad it will be. Auto sales were stable this year, but fears over tariffs and other trade disputes, increasing consumer debt and rising interest rates have the recession stress meter slowly creeping higher. In the coming year, businesses will be watching for it to redline.

Driven by results.

The big picture is even bigger than you know.

If you think wealth management is only a portfolio of assets that are balanced, diversified, and properly weighted, you're thinking too narrowly. Because without a broader wealth management strategy that integrates performance with tax planning, trusts, risk management, cash flow, retirement, estate planning, charitable giving, family assistance and so on, ROI only goes so far. Clients of Greenleaf Trust (with over $12 billion in assets under advisement) are nearly always pleasantly surprised that their big picture is even bigger, and better, than they knew.

Give us a call and we'll help you see yours.

Client relationships begin at $2 million.

MORE THAN 110 YEARS

THE ART OF LIVING Well

Retirement in the 21st century looks different than ever before. Today's older adults are dynamic, digital and determined to pursue all those ideas and activities they've been putting off for later.

At UMRC, we work to build communities and services capable of ensuring senior living is just that – living, in every sense of the word. We offer the region's widest range of personal and residential choices which include maintenance-free living, chef-run dining experiences, a vibrant social life and dynamic exercise programs. We welcome all, regardless of faith or national origin, to benefit from our superior staff and healthcare providers throughout our Continuum of Care. Learn more by visiting our communities in Chelsea, Dexter, Detroit, Ypsilanti, Jackson or online at UMRC.com.

Because living well is what it's all about.

THE BIG PICTURE/MOTOR CITY

This list of woman-owned businesses is an approximate compilation of the largest such businesses headquartered in Michigan. Percentage of the company that is woman owned may not be solely held by the leading shareholder. Number of full-time employees may include full-time equivalents. It is not a complete listing but the most comprehensive available. Crain's estimates are based on industry analyses and benchmarks, news reports and a wide range of other sources. Unless otherwise noted, information was provided by the companies. Detroit Manufacturing Systems LLC which was No. 2 on last year's list no longer qualifies since CEO Andra Rush sold her majority share in the company to Bruce Smith in August. Global Supply Solutions and Millennium Software did not respond before the publication date. NA = not available.

① Marian Ilitch is the chairperson of the company after the death of husband, Michael Ilitch, on Feb. 10, 2017. Excludes revenue from Detroit Tigers.

② Crain's estimate.

③ From Forbes. Net of stadium revenue used for debt payments.

Macomb County Manufacturing Day

Manufacturing Day is a celebration of modern manufacturing meant to inspire the next generation of manufacturers. On October 5, Macomb County celebrated its sixth annual Manufacturing Day. Thanks to the willingness of local companies to get involved, more than 2,100 high school students visited area plants to see the industry in action and learn about career opportunities.

A utility patent protects the invention of a new machine, process or composition. The invention must be useful, such as software or stamping machine, to qualify for a utility patent. This year, Crain's collaborated with IFI CLAIMS Patent Services to compile the list of Michigan's top patenting companies. The list is based on US Utility patents granted in 2016, 2015 and 2014. The counts are based on the number of utility patent filings of companies with major local operations and where at least one listed inventor is shown as residing in Michigan. The count only includes patents with a Michigan connection. Companies with headquarters elsewhere are listed with the address and top executive of their main Detroit-area office. IFI CLAIMS Patent Services maintains a database of standardized names for patent assignees and applicants. This database is the basis for this year's Michigan list. NA = not available.

ANDREW JOWETT FOR CRAIN'S

Moderator Mark Lezotte (left); Dennis Mouras, CEO, UnitedHealthCare Community Plan of Michigan; Isabel Jones, manager of Managed Care Integration, Washington State Health Care Authority; Willie Brooks, president and CEO, Detroit Wayne Mental Health Authority; and Dohn Hoyle, director of public policy, The Arc Michigan, speak on a panel about the best ways to coordinate and pay for mental health care.

Health Care Leadership Summit: A look back

By Jay Greene
jgreene@crain.com

With Michigan one year away from testing whether Medicaid HMOs can work effectively with behavioral health organizations to integrate health services, a Washington state Medicaid official gave attendees at Crain's Health Care Leadership Summit a glimpse of one potential future.

Isabel Jones, integration manager with the Washington State Health Care Authority, said three Medicaid health plans have begun contracting in two of the state's 39 counties to manage the physical and behavioral health of several thousand people. Results so far are promising, she told the audience at the October event, with eight of 31 outcome measurements exceeding other counties and the remaining 23 outcomes showing no significant changes.

"The first (six months) were rocky for the health plans to implement (the plan and contract with all willing behavioral health providers in their markets), but we are happy with the results so far," Jones said. Three more counties have begun integration this year with 180,000 lives covered with 24 counties joining in 2019 and the final 10 in 2020.

Jones said the Washington Legislature approved legislation in 2014 to move to an integrated Medicaid behavioral and physical health system by 2020, but counties could join earlier if they wanted. For nearly 20 years, Washington Medicaid and others used three systems of care for physical, mental health and substance abuse services, Jones said. The intellectual developmentally delayed population had already been integrated into managed care plans.

"We tried everything — memorandums of understanding, joint meetings (to improve care coordination) — to serve our clients better," Jones said, adding that in 2016 the state of Washington ranked 46th nationally in providing mental health services to its population.

ANDREW JOWETT FOR CRAIN'S DETROIT BUSINESS

Isabel Jones, integration manager with the Washington State Health Care Authority, speaks about her state's experience during the Crain's Health Care Leadership Summit at The Henry Hotel in Dearborn.

Need to know

- Crain's 10th Health Care Leadership Summit debated integration of physical and mental health
- Keynote speakers included Washington state Medicaid integration executive Isabel Jones and Michigan HHS Director Nick Lyon
- By fall 2019, Michigan plans to go forward with three pilots and one demonstration project to test integration

While Jones cited some evidence that outcomes have improved in the two counties, she said clinical integration between physical and behavioral health providers is still a work in progress.

"The Medicaid plans are trying to offer incentives to the providers to co-locate services under one location to make it easier to coordinate care and for (patients) to receive services," she said. "There need to be mergers in the provider community or collaboratives to co-locate services."

Lessons learned

As Michigan moves to design its integrated system, Jones said Washington found that mandating strict standards for provider networks for the HMOs is necessary. For example, Washington regulators require that any Medicaid HMO that contracts with the state must also contract with any willing behavioral health provider. She said if the state found out a provider in a market did not have a contract, the HMO would need to ensure that was corrected or explain why.

"When Medicaid enrollees are in a single health plan, they can receive physical, mental and substance use services better because incentives are much better aligned," Jones said. "The health plans can do early intervention and more to a higher level of care and deliver higher-end services."

Jones said it appears that the Medicaid health plans are saving money on the physical health side by being able to deliver mild, moderate and serious mental health services. They appear to be using those premium dollar savings to expand behavioral health services, she said.

To prevent profiteering by the Medicaid HMOs, Jones said the state law limits the health plans to a 3 percent profit margin, and they are required to spend at least 85 percent of premiums on medical care.

Another lesson Jones said Michigan should note based on Washington's experience is that Medicaid HMOs have a totally different billing system than behavioral health providers.

"Focus on knowledge transfer. We spent a lot of time on communication" between the Medicaid health plans and the behavioral health organizations and providers, Jones said. "Health plans had to learn how the behavioral providers get paid. It is totally different. HMOs are not used to it," she said.

But Jones said Medicaid health plans reached out to providers they never dealt with before and understand "whole person care" much better.

"HMOs learned to work with homeless shelters, the social (safety net) system and criminal justice, the jails. They are in constant collaboration," she said.

One barrier that must be resolved over the next several years is developing an information technology system with shared medical records between HMOs and the behavioral health system, Jones said.

"Most behavioral health providers are migrating to new health records," she said. "There is no integration yet. We have seen them move more with billing" and later she expects they will share clinical information once privacy issues are worked out.

Jones said Washington state received $1.5 billion from the federal government in a 1115 waiver that allowed integration and is using some of it to help providers with new IT systems.

Michigan integration

Also at the summit, Nick Lyon, director of the Michigan Department of Health and Human Services, gave an opening keynote address to explain how Michigan began its integration process in early 2016 with the concept first proposed in Gov. Rick Snyder's 2017 budget proposal.

Lyon said he saw the now well-known "Section 298 boilerplate," which started as a budget carve-in for managed care plans to provide behavioral health services, as a starting point to discuss how best to deliver and improve delivery of physical and behavioral health. He also said he saw it as an opportunity to find a way to direct more money to the behavioral health system.

But Lyon acknowledged what many in the Snyder administration discovered: the strength and passion of the advocates of mental health as they fought strongly against quickly turning over nearly $2.8 billion in funding to the Medicaid HMOs to manage.

"The boilerplate was not greeted" favorably by advocates of the current behavioral health system, especially those who rely on home- and community-based support services, Lyon said.

However, under the leadership of Lt. Gov. Brian Calley, the state health department began early in 2016 a Section 298 process that led to 45 meetings with 1,113 people from all sides. He said three pilots and one demonstration project will begin in October 2019 to test the best way to integrate care.

"Anything we can do to make the two systems work better will help" the more than 2 million people who use either Medicaid physical health or behavioral health services.

AUTOMOTIVE/ MANUFACTURING

The business that defines the Motor City has enjoyed good times.

North American vehicle sales hovering around 17 million have kept cash flowing through Southeast Michigan's enormous base of automotive parts suppliers. Flashbacks to the Great Recession still cause executives to catch their breath when forecasting when the next one might come.

One of the biggest stories this year in the automotive business was the bumpy year navigated by Michigan's newest Fortune 500 company — Adient, the seat-making spinoff of Johnson Controls Inc. (and No. 3 on our auto suppliers list on Page 53).

Adient made headlines by announcing a dramatic headquarters move to downtown Detroit from Plymouth. It made headlines, again, when it scrapped that plan and its CEO resigned amid financial losses. We'll be watching in 2019 to see what happens next for Adient and the rest of the supply chain — and local economy.

AUTOMOTIVE/MANUFACTURING

This list of local auto dealers is an approximate compilation of the largest such businesses in Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, Washtenaw and Livingston counties. Dealership companies must have local stores to be included on this list. Penske Automotive Group is not on this list because, while it is locally headquartered, it doesn't have local car dealerships. It is not a complete listing but the most comprehensive available. Unless otherwise noted, information was provided by the companies. Actual revenue figures may vary. NA = not available.

② Crain's estimate.

③ Four of the five dealerships are outside of Michigan.

④ Includes George Matick Chevrolet, Matick Toyota and Matick Auto Exchange.

⑤ Formerly Rodgers Chevrolet Inc. Bates purchased Rodgers Chevrolet in July 2017.

FINANCE

The biggest financial news of 2018 may have been the impending arrival of a new regional bank headquarters in Detroit, the first since Comerica Inc. moved its corporate center to Dallas more than a decade ago. According to our list of largest banks, Chemical Bank would be the largest such institution with a corporate headquarters in metro Detroit. Check out the rest of our list of largest banks on Page 63.

On another financial front, 2018 saw some very big news in the venture capital world, with the exit by acquisition from Ann Arbor-based Duo Security, sold for $2 billion to computer networking giant Cisco. Although its ventural capital investors were primarily on the coasts, the eye-popping valuation and sale are only going to bring more eyeballs and dollars to Ann Arbor's startup scene. Our list of largest venture capital firms appears on Page 65.

REAL ESTATE

Real estate was nearly synonymous with business in Detroit in 2018.

The year started with work getting under way on what it planned to be Detroit's tallest building, a Dan Gilbert project on the site of the former Hudson's flagship store. And as the year went on, plans for that tower kept getting taller and taller (at press time, the vision had grown from 734 feet to 912 feet). Only time will tell where exactly it tops out.

Corktown saw the year's other major real estate story — the purchase and planned renovation of the long-vacant Michigan Central Station by Ford Motor Co. The automaker is aiming to make that piece of early 20th century history into the laboratory for transportation for the early 21st century.

Those were the big headlines, but there's a whole world of real estate in metro Detroit, the details of which fill the following pages.

SERVICES HEALTH CARE NONPROFITS

This last chapter of our Book of Lists is far from the least.

It contains data on the local health care industry, which employs more people than any other. It also weighs the nonprofit sector, an under-recognized financial force in our region. And we also tote up the providers of such services as legal help, staffing and others.

These are the companies that keep us and our communities healthy and our businesses humming.

People over everything. It's that simple.

At its heart, a business is about people. A group of people coming together to create something bigger than themselves. To create a solution or a product or an experience in the service of other people. At Huntington, it's our belief that running a business is about more than making money, it's about making people's lives better. So let's roll up our sleeves and get to work, together.

 Huntington
